What is EPR in Packaging?

EPR (Extended Producer Responsibility) is a government rule that makes companies responsible for what happens to their packaging after the customer uses it.

In simple words, if a company uses plastic to pack their product, they must also make sure that the plastic doesn't end up as waste, and is either recycled or safely disposed of.

Why EPR is Important for Every Brand

- Mandatory by Law under India's Plastic Waste Management Rules
- Helps reduce plastic pollution and landfill waste
- Encourages brands to use eco-friendly, recyclable materials
- Builds a responsible brand image and shows care for the environment
- Plays a key role in India's "Swachh Bharat" and sustainability goals

How White Lotus Supports EPR

At White Lotus Industries Ltd., we believe packaging shouldn't just look good or be strong—it should also be responsible.

As a modern packaging partner, we ensure that all our products follow EPR guidelines:

We use recyclable and reusable materials

We are connected with authorized recyclers and waste partners

We promote sustainable packaging solutions across industries

Whether it's laminated rolls, pouches, or wrappers, our goal is to provide packaging that doesn't harm the planet.

Your Packaging Partner for a Cleaner Tomorrow

With White Lotus Industries, you don't just get packaging—you get a partner who:

- Helps your brand stay eco-conscious and legally compliant
- Supports your business in following EPR rules without stress
- Offers smart, sustainable packaging that speaks for your brand
